According to “Caregiving in the U.S. 2015,” conducted by AARP Public Policy Institute, the most common conditions caregivers identify that causes their care recipient to need care are “old age,” dementia including Alzheimer’s, wounds/surgery, cancer, mobility, mental/emotional illness, heart disease, and diabetes. On average, a caregiver has been providing care for four years; intense caregivers have been providing care for five years and expect to continue for another five years.
